Trial Support

Skadden's integrated, multidisciplinary team of trial support consultants assists our litigators in a variety of contexts, including with client presentations, appearances before regulatory bodies, mediation or arbitration, and in the courtroom.

Our attorneys work with our trial support consultants to develop trial themes and arguments, conduct research, prepare witnesses to testify, distill complex ideas into understandable and appealing visuals, plan for smooth and efficient courtroom logistics, and provide fast and comprehensive access to critical information in high-stakes situations.

Jury Research

From early testing of case themes to real-time evaluations of potential jurors based on our database of several thousand questionnaires, our jury research efforts support our litigators through:

- focus groups and mock trials;
- theme development;
- witness preparation; and
- jury selection.

Trial Coordination

Our trial support consultants efficiently manage the process associated with the entire trial, including evidence preparation tasks like pretrial filings, exhibit lists, deposition designations and case records. They also plan the on-site logistics for trial, such as identifying locations, coordinating contract negotiations and developing budgets; they then manage every aspect of the litigation "war room" to ensure that they meet any and all production requests during the course of the trial while facilitating seamless coordination of courtroom mechanics.

Graphic Design and Presentation

Our trial support consultants conceive and create compelling, persuasive graphics for use at trial, making it easier for jurors and judges to understand the case. They also possess the technological know-how to ensure that presentations are flawlessly executed, avoiding the negative impression that technical difficulties or poorly presented visuals can make.

country, including Yale Law School, Penn Law, NYU School of Law and Berkeley Law.

Skadden has partnered with PRIME, an alliance of law firms across the U.K. and Ireland that is committed to improving access to the legal profession through work experience.

Pro Bono

We are proud of our long-standing commitment to public service.

Having dedicated nearly 3 million hours to pro bono work over the last 15 years alone, Skadden's lawyers and professional staff strongly believe in using their strengths to help lift those individuals and groups unable to afford legal services.

We encourage lawyers at all stages of their careers to find a cause that sparks their interest and to match that interest with legal needs in our communities.

Our pro bono work is diverse and far-reaching. It includes work related to immigration and asylum; nonprofit incorporation, tax exemption and operations; civil litigation; administrative hearings; life planning; criminal matters; LGBTQ+; community development; veterans' issues; and cases involving domestic violence survivors.

We regularly partner with clients around the globe on shared-value pro bono and community service work, including joint legal services efforts and a range of support for clients' pro bono and charitable endeavors.

Skadden led the formation of the Law Firm Antiracism Alliance (LFAA) in 2020. The LFAA, which now includes more than 300 firms and 200,000 lawyers and other professionals, creates and facilitates opportunities to pursue equity in the law and racial justice.

Our firmwide Immigration Impact Project (IIP), launched in 2017, has opened nearly 900 immigration matters with more than 1,000 attorneys and professional staff participating.

Our commitment to pro bono work has been widely recognized: Pro Bono Innovator Award (Bloomberg Law, 2023); Pro Bono Publico Award (The Legal Aid Society, 2023); Leadership Award (Access to Justice Awards, Delaware State Bar Association, 2023); Pro Bono Champion Award (American Gateways, 2023); Beacon of Justice Award (National Legal Aid & Defender's Association, 2023); Outstanding Pro Bono Partnership Award (Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., 2023); Lead Chair Award (inaugural recipient, Combined Campaign for Justice, 2023); Gold Pro Bono Law Firm Award (Law Society of Hong Kong, 2023); named a top law firm for pro bono in the U.K. (Law.com International, 2023); and received four Outstanding Law Firm Awards (New York State Bar Association, 2023).
