Shirley Diaz assists clients in navigating inquiries and enforcement actions brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). Ms. Diaz handles SEC investigations involving a wide range of topics, including those arising under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) and those related to accounting issues. She has represented companies in the broadcast media, energy, brand management and packaging industries. In recognition of her work, Ms. Diaz was named one of the Hispanic National Bar Association's 2025 Top Lawyers Under 40.

Recent experience includes:

- representing a corporation in an SEC investigation related to its relationship with its external auditor
- defending a multinational energy corporation in an FCPA investigation related to government contracts in Latin America
- assisting a power company in responding to an SEC inquiry related to its accounting methodology

Ms. Diaz also is deeply committed to pro bono work. She has been listed in the DC Bar Pro Bono High Honor Roll every year since her admission to the bar. Her pro bono experience includes assisting immigrants with their asylum applications, impact litigation challenging changes to immigration rules and a year-long secondment at Legal Aid where she represented low-income tenants in landlord-tenant court.

Ms. Diaz serves on the Board of Governors of the D.C. Bar and the Hispanic National Bar Association. She is also a past president of the Hispanic Bar Association of the District of Columbia. Before attending law school, she worked as an analyst at a global investment bank.
