Graham Robinson is the head of Skadden's Boston office and the Boston Mergers and Acquisitions Group. He focuses his practice on mergers, acquisitions and other transactions in the pharmaceutical, medical device and technology industries in the U.S. and internationally. Mr. Robinson regularly represents public and private companies in acquisitions and divestitures, both negotiated and contested. He has significant experience advising companies in preparing for and responding to unsolicited acquisition proposals, as well as advising companies in dealing with activist investors. Mr. Robinson also regularly advises boards of directors and special committees in addressing corporate governance matters and internal investigations. According to Deal Point Data, he is ranked first (by both deal value and number of deals) among U.S. attorneys for public biotechnology M&A transactions completed since January 1, 2016. In addition, Mr. Robinson has been named one of MergerLinks' Top Healthcare Lawyers in North America and Top Advisor Lawyers in North America. He is a former member of Skadden's governing body, the Policy Committee.
